

Azure Financial Operations Review

Microsoft Azure revenues are now more than $50 billion per year.

While Microsoft shareholders welcome this revenue, is Azure costing you more than it should?

Multiple options exist for reducing your monthly Azure bill, including:

- Virtual Machine Reserved Instances
- Azure Reservations (covering App Services, Azure SQL Database and more)
- Azure Savings Plans
- Azure Hybrid Benefit

NAK's Azure Financial Operations (FinOps) Review takes a broad and deep view of your Azure costs and identifies opportunities for reducing your spend without any reduction in capability.

Working closely with your team, our NAK Azure FinOps specialists study the daily, monthly and quarterly trends driving your cloud costs while finding ways to reduce these.

Upon completing our review, we present our cost-saving recommendations in an interactive session.

What Do you Get?

- An overview of your daily, monthly, and quarterly Azure spend
- Reasons for sudden increases or decreases in Azure costs
- Recommendations for right-sizing the Azure resources you use
- Advice leveraging Azure Reservations (including VM Reserved Instances), Azure Savings Plans and Azure Hybrid Benefit
- A roadmap to available Microsoft Azure discounts and funding

Upon conclusion of the review, we present our findings to you and answer any questions you may have.

Azure costs can escalate quickly and reduce the benefit of moving your infrastructure into the cloud.
